After leaving military service in 1981, I decided to pursue a vocation in medicine. I was initially attracted to psychiatric medicine, but after some time in that field I felt I needed to pursue something more, something that addressed healing in a more complete and profound fashion. After twelve years in psychiatric medicine, I was pleased to have the opportunity to pursue a new direction that combined Traditional Chinese medicine and Naturopathic medicine. It is this vision that led to the creation of the Alpine Valley Naturopathic Clinic, where I practice with my wife and fellow naturopathic physician, Dr. Jacqueline Thomas.

In addition to my clinical duties, I also serve as a consultant to MicroMedex, Inc., which provides databases on various health topics to other medical professionals. In order to contribute to the educational needs of the naturopathic community, I joined with Dr. Eric Yarnell, N.D., R.H. to create Healing Mountain Publishing, Inc., a publishing company that currently provides both a number of naturopathic textbooks and a line of study materials to assist naturopathic students. My private practice is in Wenatchee, Washington and I can be reached at (509) 665-0867 for appointments and consultations.
